Scott Colley Becomes President of Georgia's Berry College

By Terrie Conrad

THE DEAN OF A SMALL COLLEGE faculty must be an astute politician, a practicing psychologist, and an avid student of human nature. For the past ten years, Hampden-Sydney College has enjoyed just those attributes in J. Scott Colley. A Shakespearean scholar, Dr. Colley transformed the intellectual study of human nature into a practical application as a college dean. The same talent will serve him well in his new position—on July 1 he became the President of Berry College, in Mount Berry, Georgia.

"I am the luckiest of men," declared Dean Colley, "going to a place where the questions they've raised are the ones I've worked on [at Hampden-Sydney]. The things that I perhaps do best are what the people at Berry College say they need. I very much hope I will be able to make a significant contribution."

His contributions at Hampden-Sydney have certainly been significant. In addition to his duties as Provost and Dean of the Faculty, he has served as acting President, taught courses on Shakespeare, published a book on Richard III, twice served as a National Phi Beta Kappa Lecturer, and been a board member of the Wye Faculty Seminars.

Dean Colley believed that he received as much from Hampden-Sydney as he gave. "One couldn't go to Harvard and get the kind of education that Hampden-Sydney has given me while doing this job." A revelation came within the first few weeks after his arrival at Hampden-Sydney. "It struck me that the job of dean is seven times more complex than being the chair of a large department at a research university." He paused, "I really don't have any regrets. If I had had more experience, I would have approached the job differently during my first months here. However, I was the best dean I could be every day that I came to work."

The new President of Berry College will certainly have an insight into his academic dean's performance. This, he says, is a two-edged sword. "I will be most compassionate, understanding the complexities of the job. On the other hand, I'll be like the old third baseman to the new—you should have caught that one."

The former academic dean thought that "Hampden-Sydney's future will not be much different from our present. We're committed to a liberal arts education. Our niche is the 18- to 22-year-olds and will continue to be well into the 21st century." He continued, "In the next twenty-five years we will . . . continue to keep our standards high and offer the English, philosophy, languages, and science courses that we do now. We will continue to provide academic leadership and be enablers to talented and energetic young men, encouraging them to do their jobs well—to be good men and good citizens."

To a question about the possibility of recruiting adult learners at Hampden-Sydney, Dr. Colley responded, "I don't see that as our future. It could be if we were not in such a competitive area." He thought a moment, "We're not in the same market we were in thirty years ago. There were other men's colleges. The University of Virginia was a men's college. Today we're competing in a different market and in a tighter niche." He added, "We're going to have to be even better than we are today to continue to attract the small percentage of men who want to attend a men's college."

Dean Colley thinks his involvement in the 1989 strategic plan for the College was one of the important aspects of his career at Hampden-Sydney. Dr. James R. Leutze, President from 1987 until 1990, began the process of a strategic plan that merged planning and budgeting. "Dr. Leutze started the process but it was Dr. Colley that made the process work," said Dr. Paul Baker, executive assistant to President Wilson.

Dr. Colley involved more than half the members of the College faculty, staff, and trustees in setting up the strategic plan, which became the blueprint for meeting the needs, as well as ensuring the future, of Hampden-Sydney. "It was a true team effort," Dr. Colley said. "Paul Baker and Owen Norment got us rolling. Norman Krueger, Lewis Drew and I jumped right in."

"We're not in the same market we were in thirty years ago. There were other men's colleges. . . We're going to have to be even better than we are today to continue to attract the small percentage of men who will want to attend a men's college."

A COLLEY SAMPLER

"We must recognize that reading lists in the future must be more rather than less inclusive if we hope to understand the world in which we find ourselves."

'FIRING THE CANON,' 1991

"One never knows exactly what lies ahead, but careful planners are always better able to respond to surprises than those who do not engage in planning."

'PRUDENT PEOPLE PLAN AHEAD,' 1995

In the Summer 1995 Record, Dr. Colley wrote, "The 1989 strategic plan contained at least 129 objectives. We dropped six objectives during subsequent planning discussions after the 1989 strategic plan was adopted, and, according to my count, we met or are about to meet all but nine or ten of the remaining goals. Five of these unmet goals are additional staff appointments that we cannot now afford or have decided we can do without. Several others are marginal projects that we neither dropped nor pursued. Some things one never gets around to. Nevertheless, our success rate should be worth, at a minimum, an 'A' on the planning report card."

Hampden-Sydney is now again in a new strategic-planning process. This time, thanks to Dean Colley's leadership, that process will be on familiar ground.

The best way to assess an individual is, of course, by the opinions of his colleagues. Dr. Elizabeth Deis, Director of the Rhetoric Program, recently commented on Dr. Colley's leadership abilities. "As a dean, Scott had very high expectations of faculty members, but he was at the same time consistently supportive. As a result, whenever he asked me to take on some new project or to extend work on an on-going project, somehow I felt that I could do it. He has succeeded in organizing groups of faculty and getting all sorts of things done because he communicates such a strong sense of confidence in us all."

Dr. Colley's secretary over the past ten years, Maureen Culley, says the thing she most admired was the Dean's strong sense of integrity. "It permeates everything he does and is," she said.

Dr. Deis also believes that Dean Colley has been a good example of integrity. "Scott has shown me that it is possible to act on the basis of one's principles without being rigid, that it is possible to be serious about one's work but also to maintain a good sense of humor, and, above all, that collegiality, patience, tolerance, and generosity do ultimately win out in the important battles. I admire Scott for his intelligence, his even-tempered nature, and for his willingness to work tirelessly; Hampden-Sydney has benefited tremendously from his efforts."

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A DEAN

In addition to routine business—writing letters, reading reports, and "dozens more events"—a dean's calendar could include:

8:30 am: Teaches Rhetoric 100: lectures, discusses graded papers with students

10 am: Discusses May term with Associate Dean—what classes to offer, how many students to expect

10:30 am: Interviews candidate for media librarian position

11 am: Discusses Honors Program with the Director

1 pm: Meets with Housing Committee—prioritizes student housing needs, assigns faculty housing

1:30 pm: Discusses promotion to full professorship with faculty member

2:30 pm: Discusses international studies program with director—financial aid availability, safety issues

3 pm: Discusses load determination with professor: how many classes to be taught next semester

4 pm: Discusses professional development with faculty member—research papers, work in progress, book publication date

6:30 pm: Speaks and presides at Public Service Awards dinner

9 pm: Welcomes overnight College guests to Dean's residence

"His schedule is unbelievable—he easily puts in sixty hours a week and never seems to get tired," said Mrs. Culley (see sidebar). "I have never, in ten years, heard him complain about the endless stream of meetings, interviews with job candidates, off-campus trips, or all the social functions he must attend. And," she continued, "his home is always open for guests on campus."

Perhaps the measure of a man is his capacity to make friends. President Sam Wilson said, "Scott Colley is one of my very best friends. I shall miss him, of course, professionally but also, in a very profound way, personally. He has been one of the best running mates with whom I've ever worked."

Dean Colley has said he will miss Hampden-Sydney and all the friends he has made in the community. "It's time to move on, though; it's time for Hampden-Sydney to get a new dean who has fresh ideas and a different perspective. Larry Martin is bringing strengths we need now, and will need in the years just ahead." He added, "Change is good for all of us."

Even so, Scott Colley cannot escape Hampden-Sydney entirely: one Hampden-Sydney man helped found Berry College; another built its landmark electric-generator waterwheel.

Summer 1998

Dr. Lawrence H. Martin Named Dean of the Faculty

By Jason B. Kello '99, News Editor of the Tiger

THE PICTURES OF JERRY GARCIA and JFK do not look as if they really belong in the office of a Dean of the Faculty, even though they are in nice frames (unlike the ones found in dorm rooms). Then again, his slightly long, white hair does not look like the hair of a Dean of the Faculty either. All of this means nothing, however, after you talk with Dr. Lawrence Martin, Hampden-Sydney College's new Dean of the Faculty, and you realize the pride he has in this school and its tradition of strong teaching.

The Tufts University graduate is no stranger to the issues which face the office—he comes to the position having served two terms as Associate Dean of the Faculty, and he was selected from the ranks of the faculty (an English professor, Marrin has his doctorate from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst). Although the usual process for filling a position this high on the academic hierarchy includes a nationwide search, many in the faculty felt it undesirable, with the impending retirement of President Wilson, to have two of the top three positions in the school's management filled by people with very little background in the College's life and history. After a survey of the faculty, President Wilson made his decision, and Marrin was named Dean.

Enrering the office, Martin professes no overwhelming agenda, or changes he hopes to bring ro the office. His main concern? "That the broad aims of the College be achieved, and that we are doing the best we can do." He hopes his position can help create an atmosphere in which teachers are always focusing on teaching: "I would like to provide a setting for teachers to do their best."

Dean Martin lists what he considers his most important tasks: "Good hiring, rigorous retention of good teachers, evaluation of faculty, providing opportunities for focusing on teaching, recognition of outstanding work, and providing a setting for good teachers to do their best." He sees his new job as the chief faculty member among the approximately 100 professors who make up this institution. As such, he repeatedly speaks of creating an atmosphere or serting for good teachers.

Martin says that when comparing faculties with those of other schools, he always wins. Outside research, community involvement, and heavy class loads are characteristics of most of the teachers whom Martin sees as the backbone of Hampden Sydney.

Dr. Martin enters the position just as the College starts to reevaluate the curriculum, for the first time since in 1982. He sees this debate as a chance for Hampden-Sydney to reaffirm its liberal arts tradition: "We intend to strengthen the current program, not make any drastic changes." Among the ideas which Martin saw as possibilities for change: adding a Western Culture course in the same vein of the Western Civilization course already offered, and strengthening the science requirement for all students (Dr. Martin says the current science requirement could become more focused by having the students follow through to the 102 level course in one area, rather than having two semesters of two unrelated courses in science).
The Rhetoric Program, in which the new Dean strongly believes, might be enhanced by having the 102 courses be more like a Freshman Seminar, allowing the study of one issue, while still focusing on writing skills and specific needs of students.

Martin looks to expand para-curricular programs already in place, such as the Technology Initiative, which helps teachers incorporate computers and other technology into classes thar would not otherwise have taken advantage of them. Other projects which Martin hopes will enhance the education of Hampden-Sydney students include the Distance Learning compurer hookup with Lynchburg College and Sweet Briar College, and the Academic Venture Fund. Taking the best courses and teachers from each school, the Distance Learning Program would offer them, via TV and the Internet, ro students at all three schools.

Announcing Dr. Martin's appointment, President Wilson said, "He brings to his new duties an intimate understanding of the College and a good grasp of administrative procedures. It gives me great pleasure that Larry Martin has accepted our offer to become the next Dean of the Faculty. I look forward to working with him."

"What are my goals as Dean of the Faculty? Good hiring, rigorous retention of good teachers, evaluation of faculty, providing opportunities for focusing on teaching, recognition of outstanding work, and providing a setting for good teachers to do their best."

A New Image for Fraternities

By Terrie Conrad

Hampden-Sydney's recent task force has recommended keeping the fraternity system, emphasizing the positive aspects of fraternity participation, and working to eliminate problems.

THE CONCERN IS INCREASINGLY heard on college campuses that fraternities may not be the ideal" setting for positive student involvement. Headlines during the past decade have made the public aware of abuses and lack of restraint among fraternity members. Under the gun of parental complaints, colleges are making decisions about whether to keep fraternity systems or to abandon them.

In that spirit, Hampden-Sydney College recently completed a task force study that recommended keeping the fraternity system. The College hopes that by emphasizing the positive aspects of fraternities and by working to eliminate problem areas, the Greek system at Hampden-Sydney will once again offer a student the positive benefits of a fraternal organization.

The recommendations of the Fraternity Task Force were approved by the Board of Trustees on February 7, 1998. A mission statement in support of Greek Life at Hampden-Sydney was also approved (see sidebar, next page).

The first of the six recommendations was the adoption of the mission statement as well as a system of incentives and rewards to "encourage the realization of the principles and precepts in the mission statement." To encourage academic achievement, there will be a cash prize for fraternities whose communal grade-point average exceeds the all-men's average for that year. Similarly, a cash prize will be given to the fraternity pledge class whose communal grade-point average for an academic year exceeds the all-freshmen average.

Care and maintenance of fraternity houses will also be rewarded. The College will determine what the average cost to make repairs during the year to a fraternity house; fraternities whose repair costs fall under that amount will receive a portion of the difference. In addition, the College will determine, based on past records, the average yearly cost for energy in a fraternity house; again, fraternities which are able to reduce their annual energy costs will share a portion of the savings.

Also included in the first recommendation is a call for fraternities to become involved in community service. In order to encourage this participation, the College will provide a Community Service Award each year to the fraternity which has the best community- service program for the year, with a recognition dinner during Greek Week and trophy presentation during Opening Convocation the following fall. Fraternities will be recognized for good deeds and behavior of Fraternities have a long and honorable history at Hampden-Sydney. The oldest extant Hampden-Sydney photograph (right) shows a party of Beta Theta Pi brothers and their friends on an excursion to Richmond in 1868; early lodges maintained a homelike atmosphere (lower left); and today many chapters undertake public service projects, like these volunteers who help put on the yearly Special Olympics on campus (lower right).

Mission Statement for Fraternities at Hampden-Sydney College

As approved by the Board of Trustees on February 7, 1998

The Board of Trustees of Hampden-Sydney College believes in and supports the existence of Greek Life at the College under the following conditions:

A fraternity is a group of young men who come together as friends and, through an educational and cooperative process, develop the bonds of brotherhood. These young men form a family of select students who, like traditional families, nurture the strengths of each member, develop loyalty, and educate and support each other through the developmental processes of education, socialization, and maturation. And, like a family, the individual members and pledges are each accorded respect, dignity, and protection from harm. As with biological brothers, the fraternal bond is lifelong; these are the men to whom members will turn in the future for friendship, guidance, and solace. Membership is a serious matter, and one on which a brother will be recognized and judged throughout his life.

Each fraternity member knows and is guided by the ideals and rituals of his national organization and, as part of the family of his fraternity, will adhere strictly to these principles:

- That every member and pledge will be accorded respect and treated with dignity.
- That every member and pledge will remember that the primary reason for being at Hampden-Sydney is education, and the fraternity will be diligent in encouraging rushees, members, and pledges to pay strict heed to their academic responsibilities.
- That the organization and its individual members will accept responsibility for their actions. They understand that part of the educational and fraternal process is accountability.
- That, when disciplinary action is warranted, the group will have the courage to carry the action through the appropriate fraternal or institutional processes while still supporting the individual or group.
- That every member will be encouraged to develop a broad understanding of the world around him and to serve the needs of the community beyond the fraternal and institutional families.
- That pledges are treated in a manner consistent with "a younger brother" and are guided by the brothers in their development as future leaders and gentle men.
- That the officers of each fraternity will seek institutional and/or national support and guidance when they have difficulty within the brotherhood.
- That the brothers will anticipate the possible outcomes of their actions and prohibit any activities which might cause harm to themselves or others.

"Fraternities fill the void for a 'rite of passage' for a young man. At its best, the fraternity system provides a sense of belonging and the opportunity to make lasting friendships."

their members, and the positive aspects of Greek Life will be promoted in the Tiger and the Record.

The second recommendation is that there will be clearly defined expectations for reform of fraternities within a specified time and clearly defined consequences if fraternities fail to comply. Even as the College affirms the fraternities, the fraternities need to promote and affirm the ideals of the College's mission ro "educate good men and good citizens in an atmosphere of sound learning." Reform will include an emphasis on serving the community; the appropriare treatment of pledges, guests, and other fraternities; zero-tolerance for destruction of property, alcohol abuse, and illegal drug use; insistence upon holding each other accountable for actions; elimination of potentially life- or health-threatening activities, particularly hazing; strong self-governance; and the promorion of academic achievement by members and pledges. Part of this recommendation urges that "evidence of movement toward full reform must begin immediately" and warns that "evidence of a failure to inculcate these ideals, at any stage, will result in the review of a fraternity's or the Greek system's right to exist."

The third recommendation calls for clearer and more explicit expectations for fraternity advisors, who must support fraternity's efforts to conform to the College's goals for reform. Specifically, fraternity advisors will artend two fraternity meetings per semester and will be involved in Rush, pledging, and initiation functions and community service projects.

The fourth recommendation is that the pledge education programs for fraternities must be evaluated to ensure consistency with National fraternity standards and College policies. Each fraternity will submit its pledge education program, in writing, for approval by the Associate Dean of Students, its faculty advisor, and its national office. Pledge education programs will be limited to eight school weeks from the First Day of Pledging, and effective immediately "hell weeks" will no longer exist—since those have historically involved potentially harmful activities toward pledges. The Interfraternity Council is formulating guidelines for permitted activities, which will assure that no required fraternity function will interfere with a pledge's academic responsibilities or consume an inordinate amount of a pledge's time. There will be no hazing; those found guilty of hazing will be subject to prosecution by the IFC, the Student Court, and, possibly, the Commonwealth of Virginia under its laws against hazing. Each fraternity is responsible for ensuring that its members do not haze pledges. The poor judgment of an individual member could jeopardize the existence of his fraternity.

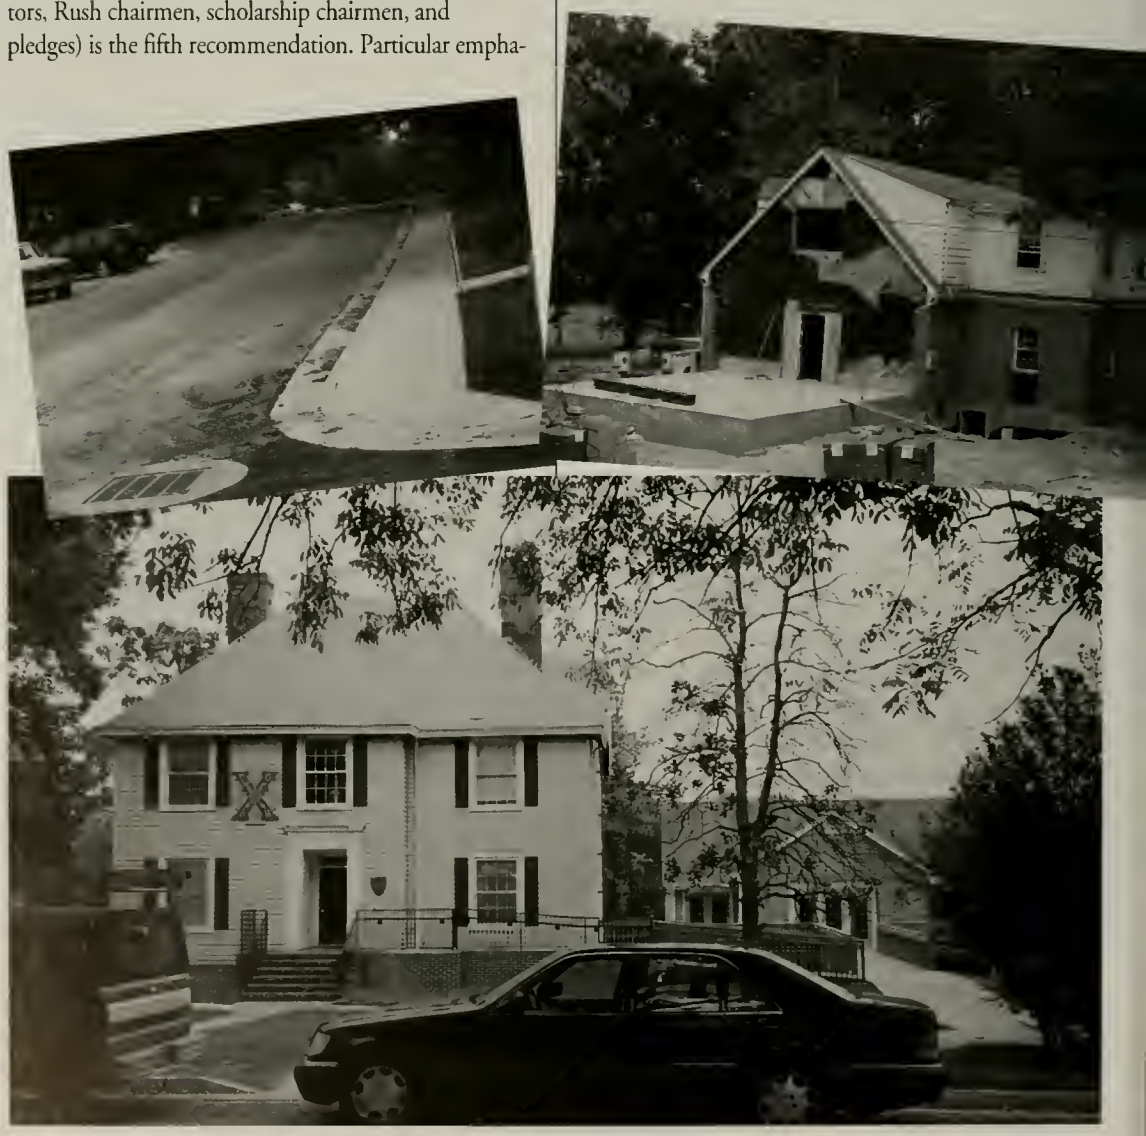
That there will be annual educational sessions for fraternity members (include presidents, pledge educators, Rush chairmen, scholarship chairmen, and pledges) is the fifth recommendation. Particular emphasis is to be placed upon the elimination of hazing.

The final recommendation is that the Interfraternity Council, along with selected faculty, staff, and students, will review the judicial procedures of the IFC to ensure consistent, just, and firm enforcement of IFC Statutes.

The Board of Trustees of Hampden-Sydney College has made a substantial financial commitment, not only by renovating fraternity houses, but also by funding the Task Force recommendations—all in an effort to improve and continue Greek Life at Hampden-Sydney. "Fraternities," said Dr. David Klein, Associate Dean of Students, "fill that void for a 'rite of passage' for a young man. At its best, the fraternity system provides a sense of belonging and the opportunity to make lasting friendships."

The commitment by the College has been made. It is now up to the fraternities—actually up to their members—to assure that the tradition of Greek Life is maintained at Hampden-Sydney.



A significant part of the College's investment in reviving the fraternities is an effort to make the houses safe, comfortable, and conducive to study. Two houses have been remodeled; construction began on two more this summer; the process will continue, two at a time, over the next few years. At top right, the Pi Kappa Alpha house, stripped for the addition of a new social room; at top left, new curbing installed on Atkinson Avenue; at right, the renovated Chi Phi house and its social room show the kinds of amenities the other fraternity houses will eventually have.

International Study Expands

By Terrie Conrad

MEASURING THE ECOLOGICAL impact of waves upon a fragile Costa Rica shoreline after a rain storm, or exploring the pyramids of Egypt with a professor of philosophy—if you think these sound like classic examples of "opportunity," you're right.

And that is precisely what Hampden-Sydney College offers participants in its international studies program. Students can also choose to study history or literature at Oxford in England, the classics in Greece, or language skills in Cannes, France. There is diversity in and, just as important, wide-spread support of the international studies program for our students.

The international studies program had its modest beginning in 1967, when Dr. Stanley Gemborys, professor of biology, began taking students on treks to Costa Rica to explore rain forests, in an effort to give them some professional field-work experience. Then, during spring break, he would take students to his farm in Connecticut and camp out with them, so they would have the chance to see and study the differences between northern and southern environments.

Some years later, in 1980, the College was invited to join the Virginia Program at Oxford, an international-study scheme sponsored by a consortium of schools around the state. Dr. Lawrence Martin, professor and former chair of the English Department, was our first representative to the consortium and sent the first Hampden-Sydney students to Oxford.

These professorial initiatives have now grown into a full-fledged international studies program, with numerous opportunities for students. Hampden-Sydney College has shown its commitment to international study by hiring a coordinator of international studies and establishing an international studies committee.

Why this emphasis on studying abroad?

"Study in another country can be a major contribution to your college education," reads the International Studies brochure. "It offers the opportunity to learn a foreign language, experience life within another political and cultural order, and develop more self-reliance than is possible in an American college. International study will allow you to take different courses, make new friends, challenge your cultural assumptions, and perhaps see life in a different way."

Seeing life in a different way was exactly what happened to W. Christopher Kurowski '98. "Because of my international-study experiences through Hampden-Sydney," he says, "I have decided to pursue a Master's Degree in International Relations in Durham, England." When he entered as a freshman, Kurowski had no plans to participate in a study-abroad program. "You hear about students traveling across the globe, but I had no idea that I would be one of them. Like most students, I assumed that the application process for international study would be too complicated or the financial burden would be too great. Fortunately, I was wrong."

"Students with overseas experience," according to Kurowski, "gain a unique perspective about the world around them, a perspective which can't be built in the classroom—even at Hampden-Sydney."

Professor Rebeca Prell, Coordinator of International Studies at Hampden-Sydney, believes financial concerns should not prohibit a student from pursuing studies abroad.

"Hampden-Sydney has one of the most generous financial policies for study abroad, if not the most generous," she says. "I know of no other institution which allows federal, state, and institutional funds to be used for overseas programs other than its own. Hampden-Sydney allows participation in more than 40 semester- and year-long programs administered by other organizations." She points out that Hampden-Sydney makes study-abroad opportunities affordable for students by allowing the regular tuition payments—and often even financial aid—to apply toward the cost of study abroad.

Ms. Prell and the International Studies Committee (chaired by Dr. Dan Mossler, professor of psychology),

"Hampden-Sydney has one of the most generous—if not the most generous—financial policies for study abroad. Hampden-Sydney makes study-abroad opportunities affordable for students."

Director of the International Studies Program and Lecturer in Spanish

have worked hard to address student and parental concerns about safety, as thoroughly as they have already covered financial issues. According to Ms. Prell, the Office of International Studies produces an extensive pre-departure package, containing health and safety advice, standards of conduct, alcohol policy, as well as cultural information. In addition, all students are required to attend a pre-departure session to review and discuss health and safety issues as well as the "do's and don't's" of international travel. Ms. Prell also makes sure that wherever Hampden-Sydney students are studying abroad, the local embassy or consulate has a list of students and their itineraries. Should there ever be a question of safety or the slightest doubt about the stability of conditions in a country, the trip is canceled. Says Ms. Prell, "We don't take chances with our students."

The dedication to providing students with opportunity for growth that began with Professors Gemborys and Martin has expanded campus-wide. Dr. James Schiffer, a professor of English, now serves as director of the Virginia Program at Oxford, and a philosophy professor, Dr. Patrick Wilson, coordinates the annual study trip to sites of classical civilizations in Egypt and other Mediterranean countries. Programs tailored to language, economics, and many other interests are available to students. Dr. Mossler believes that, thanks to the success of the early experiments, Hampden-Sydney found it easier to commit to study-abroad programs. As a result, students at Hampden-Sydney find that it is true that "the world has become a smaller place."

Retiring Hearts and Minds

By Terrie Conrad

William Hendley & Owen Norment

AT a college, the atmosphere of quality is a direct reflection of the professors who teach there. Just as in a college sports program, where the team is only as good as its players, the bottom-line for academics is the same—you're only as good as your professors. Hampden-Sydney has just seen two of its best retire.

Dr. William R. Hendley, Associate Professor of Economics, has been teaching at Hampden-Sydney since 1970. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Yale University, Dr. Hendley received his Ph.D. from Duke University. He came to Hampden-Sydney after teaching at Cornell College.

Perhaps his most enduring legacy—beside the generations of students he has taught—is the Hobbie Symposium on Business Ethics, a result of his effort to incorporate the study of ethics into the study of economics. He envisioned that students would best grasp an understanding of ethics and its place in the modern world by hearing first-hand "real-life" stories from alumni and other successful businessmen. Since 1988 the Hobbie Symposium has been a part of the Hobbie Scholars Program, which Dr. Hendley designed to allow students plenty of time to interact with alumni on questions about business careers and business principles.

Dr. Hendley was chairman of the Economics Department from 1970 until 1989; he has served on numerous college committees including Faculty Affairs, Academic Affairs, and the Admissions Committee. He and his wife Gisela will continue to live in Hampden-Sydney.

Dr. Owen L. Norment, Jr., Professor of Religion, is also retiring, after being on faculty for over 32 years. Dr. Norment began teaching at Hampden-Sydney in 1966, while completing his doctorate at Duke University. An ordained minister in the Presbyterian church, Dr. Norment had already earned two graduate degrees from Union Theological Seminary in Virginia: a B.D. (cum laude) in 1958 and a Th.M. degree in 1959. After having served as a minister in the Presbyterian church, Dr. Norment came to believe that what he really wanted to do was to teach. His vocation was confirmed when he taught at Duke while doing graduate studies.

Owen Norment (far left) is remembered for his deep thinking, gentle demeanor, and ready smile. Bill Hendley (left) trademarks are his quick wit, crackling accent, and idiosyncratic bow ties.

"My two bosses—Bill hired me, Owen was my dean—took a young fellow and raised him up right. I wish to thank each man for providing me with clear examples of the proper way to make a difference at a small, craggy liberal arts college. To the best of my recollection, neither man has ever sought to establish himself as anyone's role model. In so doing, each indelibly left me with a passion for the selfless act, for the deed without sought-for recognition, for putting students' educations first."

KENNETH TOWNSEND
Elliott Professor of Economics

"I came to Hampden-Sydney because it was close to Duke," Dr. Norment said. "I thought I could finish my dissertation here while teaching. I had no intention of staying, but Hampden-Sydney captured me."

His floor-to-ceiling bookshelves reflect both his intellectual curiosity and his eclectic tastes. There are C. S. Lewis and Scott Peck, side by side. Elizabeth Kubler Ross is also in his collection; heavier tomes on religion and philosophy are scattered throughout the shelves.

While he is looking forward to retirement and completing his book, he says he will miss his students. The best times at Hampden-Sydney, he recalls, were when "I had a class that would reach out and want to learn, and when I had students with whom I formed a real intellectual and personal connection."

Dr. Norment and his wife, the artist Rachel Norment, have built a house on Lake Anna, near Charlottesville.

FACULTY THEMSELVES FORM A bond based on shared experiences and of course, intellectual discourse. Dr. Kenneth Neal Townsend, Elliott Professor of Economics, has allowed The Record to share his recollections of his experience as a "young" professor at Hampden-Sydney under the tutelage of both Drs. Hendley and Norment:

"When I arrived in 1980, Morton Hall was appreciably different from what it is today. Telephone wires ran up the outside of the building. Departments mingled offices. The open stairwell invited multi-level conversations. Students hung jackets and hats on hooks that ringed the walls at eye level on each floor.

"Faculty signed out pencils, chalk, paper, and staples from the secretary's office. Computer use consisted of one roving terminal with a long phone cord and an acoustic modem—1,200 baud! To use it, one went to Jane Mahn's office and checked it out, running the gauntlet of laughs and taunts back up to the second floor, where one's office phone was relocated to the classroom on a 50-foot cord. Everyone parked his Volare—yes, these were mandatory—right up against the building.

"The economics department owned a second-hand TI calculator, a Monroe Classmate mechanical office calculator—it was fun to have students watch the counters whir and click as they observed the calculation of their grades—and one-half of a l6mm film projector; the department of religion owned the other half. My second-floor officemates were the late Willard Bliss, an icon in the history department, an adolescent David Gibson, and campus lions Bill Hendley and Owen Norment. In that more open, unguarded day, we flouted fire code conventions, threw caurion to the wind, and kept our office doors open. We had to—the old converted coal furnace heated second and third-floor temperatures to mid-80s. Air conditioning was a spotty proposition, with smallish window units from the early 70s hung from office sills, next to the entering phone lines. Windows didn't open and close. So we, like tenants on the stoops of row houses, "hung out" and listened to each other.

"Cantabrigian and economist A. C. Pigou coined the term 'negative externality' to describe the actions of people in which an individual receives the benefits of an action, but society bears some or all of the costs. Well . . . as Bill Hendley would put it . . . Bill does love his cigars. Owen, for those who haven't worked closely with him, loves his liturgical music, which he hums sweetly but audibly all day long.

"In the new, sanitized Morton, of course, none of this would be noticeable. In that day, it was a constant reminder of the humanity of this place. Then, a young 'whippersnapper' as Ned Crawley once described me—all of 25—and as Bill Hendley might put it, 'not yet full growed and haired over,' I labored under the noise and fumes in our dark Satanic Mill, as the poet put it. Little did I realize that when I was full-growed (festively plump is the way it's put on TV today), and post-haired over (I'm a candidate for Hair Club International), I would miss these very sounds and smells dearly.

"I don't have much to say today that would not sound hyperbolic and insincere—my esteem for my retiring colleagues is so great that it would sound like a Madison Avenue campaign to hear me describe them. I would offer simply this. My two bosses—Bill hired me, Owen was my dean—took a young fellow and raised him up right. I wish to thank each man, deeply and publicly, for providing me with clear examples of the proper way to make a difference at a small, craggy liberal arts college. To the best of my recollection, neither man has ever sought to establish himself as anyone's role model. In so doing, each indelibly left me with a passion for the selfless act, for the deed without sought-for recognition, for putting students' educations first.

"Gentlemen, I applaud you. I want to be just like you, and if my colleagues hear me hum, or see me fume (I can't handle cigars with my 60-pack a day habit on the fire department), may they understand that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery."

John Waters III '58 & Sally Waters

WHAT MAKES A TEAM?

"A mutual sense of mission, shared interesrs, and a belief in something bigger than yourselves" is the response you'd probably get from John and Sally Waters. John H. Waters '58 retired on June 30 as Director of Alumni Relations and his wife Sally retired at the same time as Financial Aid Director.

They have been a team at Hampden-Sydney College for the past thirty-three years, ever since they came to Hampden-Sydney as newlyweds of 7 months.

"I never thought I'd be here my whole working career," laughed Mr. Waters. "But we became involved in the small community of Hampden-Sydney, and then in the Farmville community." They raised two sons, John (now 29) and Todd (now 27) on the campus.

"When Lewis and Nell Drew [Lewis Drew '60, Dean of Students] told Johnny in 1963 that they were going to name a registrar separate from the academic dean," explained Sally Waters, "we both thought Hampden-Sydney would be a great place to live.

"The day we first came to the campus—the first time I saw Hampden-Sydney, in fact—the first person I met was Stokeley Fulton, the football coach," reminisced Mrs. Waters. "He was working on the field in July, mowing and trimming; but he stopped and took time to say hi. I remember thinking that the College looked the way you thought a college should look."

She continued, "I came on then as Joe Trotter's secretary. Thirty-three years ago, a generation ago. We came and stayed." Over the years both Mr. and Mrs. Waters have changed positions within Hampden-Sydney. "I started in the alumni office and Johnny started as the registrar," said Mrs. Waters. "We sort of flip-flopped, because he is now at the alumni office and up until just about five years ago, my office (financial aid) and the registrar's office were combined."

"The secret of being able to do this job well," said Mr. Waters, "is having such great alumni to work with. The alumni here are some of the most dedicated anywhere. It's hard to believe, but many other places can't evoke the kind of feelings in their alumni that Hampden-Sydney does. When you come around that bend by the football field and through the gates you remember—this is the most remarkable place."

Both John and Sally Waters believe that the sense of community and the dedication of its members is one of Hampden-Sydney's greatest strengths. "This is being part of something bigger than you are, bigger than everybody here," said Mrs. Waters. "The history of Hampden-Sydney is remarkable. You can still talk with people who remember Hampden-Sydney as a small struggling school; then, when you see what we have done, you have faith that the ongoing mission will survive. The alumni, our current students, and the staff here will not let you down," she continued. "Recently, during a state meeting, one of the members of the financial aid department of another college said our admissions staff was really top-notch and complimented them on the great job they do. Their dedication is recognized state-wide."

Over the years John Waters has been registrar, Director of Admissions and Financial Aid, and, for the last eighteen years, Director of Alumni Relations. Sally Waters—a Phi Beta Kappa alumna of Duke—has been a secretary in the alumni office and in the financial aid office; she was appointed Financial Aid Director in 1989. There have been a lot of changes during those years. "When I was here as an undergraduate there were under 400 students," Mr. Waters recalled. "When I came back to work here the student body was about 500. When I was Director of Admissions, I could pass ten students on my way to the dining hall (which was in Winston then) and know nine of those ten students. Now we're up to about 930 students, and it's harder to know people well. Of course, the faculty has increased too." Part of that growth was of his own doing: when he was Director of Admissions, the College published its first pro-active recruitment tools, actively seeking to attract students rather then "waiting for them to show up at the door."

"I hope the college will continue to be an all-male college, keeping its history and heritage," he said. "There's a place for us and there should be an opportunity for students who want to attend this type of institution." He added, "One thing that does worry me is how much it will cost to maintain our uniqueness."

"When I started in the financial aid office," said Mrs. Waters, addressing that issue, "fewer than a third of our students applied for scholarships. Now 70% of the students seek financial aid; families are looking more and more for aid packages. This will continue to be a real challenge for the College, since almost 4/5 of the population going to college automatically rule out private schools because of cost, applying to public schools instead. (What they do not understand is that private colleges can often give much better financial aid packages than public schools.) Another of our challenges is that Virginia has excellent public schools, supported by taxpayers and thus able to charge less. Our financial aid committee and the business office, however, are planning for increased scholarships to make us more competitive. We're going to have to count on alumni support to make our efforts successful; only alumni support will help to keep the value of this degree and to maintain this school." She paused: "And I just can't imagine Hampden-Sydney not continuing."

The Director of Financial Aid and the Director of Alumni Relations have been recognized as a team. The Alumni Association has designated an award, the Waters Cup, in honor of John and Sally Waters, to be given to each year's outstanding alumni chapter (see page 47). "This has been an emotional year," Mr. Waters said. "I have felt honored to say goodbye to the alumni chapters this year and remember so many friendships and good times. We will miss everybody very much"

"We're not leaving our friends completely, though," said Mrs. Waters. "We'll be back from time to time and we're moving to an area (Emerald Isle, N.C.) that has an active alumni chapter."

How does the Director of Alumni Relations want to be remembered? "I did the best that I could do and be myself. I hope that was good enough."

Letter to Johnny Waters from G. Michael Pace, Jr. '79, an attorney with Gentry Locke Rakes & Moore in Roanoke. Note: His father, Gerald M. "Gerry" Pace, was graduated from H-SC in 1963. Mike's brother Jon was graduated from H-SC in 1982; both brothers served as director of annual giving for many years.

I remember very well meeting you for the first time at Hampden-Sydney, in the summer of 1975 [Note: at the time John Waters was Director of Admissions]. When I set foot on campus on my first day as a freshman, I had not seen the College for 12 years. Dad graduated from Hampden-Sydney in 1963, after having taken a seven-year sabbatical following his junior year. During the hiatus, he married Mom, and my brother and I were born. I was four years old when Dad told us that he wanted to return to Hampden-Sydney to finish his degree. We moved to a small brick home in Keysville. Mom taught at Charlotte Court House, Jon and I stayed with Mr. and Mrs. Bigger on their farm in Keysville, and Dad traveled the 15 miles to and from campus on a motor scooter every day. Often, I would ride with him and stay with a friend while Dad attended class. I watched my father graduate and receive his diploma in Johns Auditorium in the spring of 1963. Mom, Jon, and I were seated in the balcony, and I distinctly remember watching my father walk across the stage, shake hands with Dr. Reveley, as well as those of a number of his professors, and then sit down among his classmates. My memories of the place—the way it looked, the way it felt, and the way it smelled—I remembered well when I set foot on campus again, the first day of my freshman year in 1975. I was home.

You made me feel welcome that day and have done much since then to confitm that Hampden-Sydney was, for me, the perfect place to grow up. It is hard now for me to believe that you will be retiring from the College after 33 years of service. All of us owe you so much that we can never definitively tell you how deeply we appreciate your devotion to the College and loyalty to us as lifelong members of the Hampden-Sydney community.

Personally, I thank you for taking the chance on me. All the positive things that have happened to me in my adult life are primarily the result of my admission to Hampden-Sydney and my experiences there. You have been a positive influence on my life, and on the lives of so many other young men who have had the good fortune to attend the College, and none of us can thank you enough.

I know that you and Sally will enjoy the time together at the beach. You will, however, as far as I am concerned, always "be" at Hampden-Sydney.

Judge Hay has been an admissions volunteer, a class representative on the Patrick Henry Society's Board of Directors, and chairman of his class's 40th reunion. In his introduction of Judge Hay, President Wilson said, "Throughout his long tenure on the bench, Judge Hay developed a reputation for walking that fine line that assures that justice is tempered properly by mercy."

The Honorable Joseph Albert Leafe '58, an attorney and senior partner with the firm of Willcox and Savage in Norfolk, Virginia, was recently appointed Circuit Court Judge for Norfolk. He was a member of the Virginia House of Delegates from 1972 until 1980, when he was elected to the Norfolk City Council. During his twelve-year tenure as councilman, he served eight years as mayor of Norfolk. He is vice-rector of the Eastern Virginia Medical School, having joined the board in 1994; he was recently appointed to an additional three-year term. He also serves as a Director of First Virginia Bank, Tidewater.

Covington artorney William T. Wilson '60, a partner with the firm of Wilson and Updike, received his law degree from the University of Virginia in 1963. He has served as president of both the Hampden-Sydney Alumni Association and the Alleghany Alumni Club. This past year he was elected president of the Virginia Chapter of the American Board of Trial Advocates. He also serves as a member of the Virginia State Bar Council and has been very active in other professional organizations, including the Virginia Bar Association, the Virginia Trial Lawyers Association, the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, and the Alleghany Highlands Chamber of Commerce. A substitute judge for the Alleghany County Court from 1970 to 1973, he was Commissioner of Accounts for Alleghany County and for the city of Covington from 1971 to 1991. In 1974, he was first elected to the Virginia House of Delegates and, during a tenure that lasted until 1989, was ranked among the General Assembly's most effective members.

W. Randolph Chitwood '68 M.D. was named a Trustee of the College in July 1998. A renowned cardiac surgeon, he has pioneered many techniques to make heart operations safer, faster, less painful, and more affordable.

Cushing Progress: Paint, carpets, columns—and residents

Thanks to good progress maintained during the summer, the renovated Cushing Hall was actually ready when 101 freshmen and seven resident advisors moved in during the last week of August. Among the improvements the students found were fan-coil units for heating and cooling each room, bathrooms on each floor, new carpets, and computer hookups in each room. The entryways of each passage feature floor tiles made from slate from the old roof.

On the exterior, at the base of the walls, a new brick water table and stuccoed splash guard have been installed. Some exterior work is still going on: repointing brickwork; replacing all the 1833 stone windowsills with concrete duplicates; and constructing brick-edged concrete sidewalks in place of the old asphalt pathways.

Workers have installed reproduction columns (above) on the new brick steps of the south porches, replacing the ca. 1910 originals, which were judged beyond repair. Now that the construction fences have been taken down, restorative landscaping is under way.

The porches on Cushing (or stoops, as Dr. Graves Thompson '27 says they used to be called) with their new brick steps and columns.

Completing such a major project in a tight deadline was not easy, but overall the process of renovating the building went remarkably smoothly, said C. Norman Krueger, Vice President for Business and Treasurer. During the summer the construction team met on a daily, often hourly, basis in order to effect a timely turnover of the building to the College before the opening of school.

Fine Arts students of professors David Lewis and Pam Fox put on a year-end portfolio exhibit of their work (right) in Winston Hall. Media ranged from watercolor to pinhole photography, from pastels to reproductions of Native American ceremonial articles.

Three musicians, students of professor James Kidd, gave a recital of the works they had learned during the semester; like his classmates, Beard Bates '01 (far right) performed admirably, even though none of them had studied piano before, much less played in front of an audience.

Commencement '98

The Honorable Donald Rumsfeld, 13th Secretary of Defense (under President George Bush), in his speech to the graduating class of 1998, compared graduation to jumping out of an airplane: "It's exhilarating," he said, "but you do hope the parachute will open." He went on to explain, however, that, relieved as you may be when the 'chute opens, "it's what happens afterwards that I want to talk about today. That, of course, will depend on what you take away with you from here, and then, what you do with it."

A 1954 graduate of Princeton, Mr. Rumsfeld believes that Hampden-Sydney offers "the kind of education that seems somewhat rare in our America of today. And that rarity is America's loss."

Describing Hampden-Sydney as "a College thar cherishes the past, honors the classics, and takes pride in extending the great traditions of Western civilization," he said, "Hampden-Sydney gives you what America at its best is about."

A former congressman, Mr. Rumsfeld said that in order to have a secure democracy America needs an electorate that can recognize what is practical, appropriate, and achievable. "In a lot of public activity today," he said, "intelligent thought has gone out of style."

This trend, however, must be reversed, he suggested, "Because our world is so complex, we have to think more, think better, and think faster than ever before. You're fortunate that you've been trained here to relate one thing to another—to integrate the various fields of learning into a comprehensive whole."

The 181 students in the class of 1998 listened with rapt attention as Mr. Rumsfeld assured them of the world's "breathtaking promise," as well as of its continuing and "very genuine peril." Mr. Rumsfeld told the graduates that it does matter how America uses her freedom: "Freedom is on the march," he believes; "the ideals which America represents are propelling the sweep of political democracy and market economies around the world."

Students to hold Alumni Pig-picking

Student members of the Hampden-Sydney College Republican Society are scheduling a pig-roast for all alumni members of the club, on Saturday, October 24, 1998, after the football game against Catholic University. The event will be held on the Hampden House Patio. Society chair Andrew Conlan says, "This will truly be a time of Southern fellowship, as we celebrate coming together under a combined Hampden-Sydney and Republican spirit. It is your company that will make this a gracious event!"

The Society requests that guests reply to the invitation as soon as possible, but preferably by October 1, 1998, either by mail to the Society at P. O. Box 378, Hampden-Sydney, VA 23943, or by e-mail to conlana@hsc.edu.

Development Office wins prestigious national recognition for its performance

Hampden-Sydney College has won the 1998 Circle of Excellence Award in Educational Fund-raising from the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE).

The award is given for exemplary performance in the College's development operation, as determined by the judges' analysis of data submitted by the College to the Council for Aid ro Education (CFAE) in its annual "Voluntary Support of Education" survey. The College was chosen by the judges, rather than self-nominated, on the basis of the reports which CFAE requires each year. Hampden-Sydney won the award for the fiscal year which ended on June 30, 1997; among its fellow winners were "big guns" like UCLA, the University of Michigan, and the U.S. Military Academy.

Vice President for Development C. Beeler Brush said, "This award is indeed a great honor. We are proud and glad to have been selected." He credits the success of our fundraising to "simply working long and hard—and together." Among the systematic efforts of the development staff he cited the effort to establish institutional priorities "from the top down"; to keep up berter interpersonal relationships with alumni, friends, and trustees; and to concentrate on good stewardship, including frequent and informative reports to donors on the use of their funds.

Trustee Malcolm Myers '57 (center, at microphone) received the Keating Medallion during Commencement weekend. With him are former recipients of the Medallion, which recognizes outstanding service and generosity to the College. The award was endowed by James J. Keating, Jr. '56.

Grouped around President Wilson and his "Spirit of Southside" Award are Charles Cleveland (YMCA regional director), John Waters '58 (honorary chairman of the event), Mary Kay Gates, Patsy Watson (executive director, Farmville YMCA), General Wilson, A. Pierre Jackson (attorney and master of ceremonies), Susi Wilson, and Carolyn Culicerto.

President Wilson honored by Farmville YMCA

President Samuel Vaughan Wilson was recently honored at an awards dinner, where the Southside Virginia Family YMCA in Farmville gave him the first-ever "Spirit of Southside" Award. Acting YMCA executive director Patsy Watson said the Y wanted to honor someone who "embodied that homegrown flavor, a person who has grown up in this area, and who really has made a name for themselves, both in their field and as someone who's done volunteer work." Mary Kay Gates, a YMCA board member, added, "Obviously, Sam is loved by the community. A lot of people were eager to honor Sam for what he's done for them and for the area."

The dinner, held at Hampden-Sydney, was well attended by citizens of the surrounding communities. President Clinton and Virginia Governor Jim Gilmore, along with other legislators, sent cirations honoring President Wilson, which were read during the dinner. The Southside Virginia Family YMCA is hoping that the "Spirit of Southside" Award will become an annual or semi-annual fund-raising event.

Among this summer's construction projects was the conversion of Memorial Gate (left) to accommodate the handicapped. The stepped brick platform (itself added after the original construction of the gate) was removed and replaced with grass, so that the sidewalk is now all on one level, ending at the street with an incline for wheel chairs and walkers. Lights have been added as well to help illuminate the sidewalk and the memorial plaques on the walls.

HOWARD COBBS '34

George Walker '10 and his son, George Walker, Jr., (later a member of the class of 1937) in front of Kinderton, their house in Worsham, around 1934.

"Either life on earth is an opportunity for the building of character, which is going about the development of the great work of art which is our lives, or it is utterly meaningless. Either a school contributes to this end or it has no reason for existence. And if a school reaches beyond this and maps out for the character it has helped develop, a dedication, a noblesse-oblige, for one's fellow travelers along the pathways of the world, that school has an added reason, a sacred one, for its existence. I view Hampden-Sydney as having this added, sacred reason for its existence."

I Was a Stranger and He took Me In

Dr. William H. Armstrong '36, author of Sounder, a Newbery-award-winning book (and later a movie), as well as of many other award-winning books, has given Hampden-Sydney College an endowed scholarship. He asked that it be named in honor of George Luther Walker '10, a former Dean of Hampden-Sydney College and Alumni Secretary, the man who, Dr. Armstrong says, "made sure I was able to come to Hampden-Sydney."

The depression years held few options for a young man seeking a college degree with no money. Because he had been given a scholarship earmarked specifically for a Rockbridge County student, young Bill Armstrong was planning to attend VMI, despite his disinclination for being a soldier. But, he thought, "It was the only way I was going to be able to go to college."

Armstrong was working at a campground the summer before entering VMI when he mer Mr. Walker. Impressed with a talk given by Armstrong, Mr. Walker believed that Armstrong was Hampden-Sydney material and went back to Hampden-Sydney and completed all the admissions and scholarship paperwork for him.

At this time, some of the dorms at H-S were closed to save the cost of heating, so Mr. Walker invited Armstrong to live with him in his home, along with three other students.

"I think it's very important," said Dr. Armstrong, looking back, "that people remember that this giving man took me, a stranger, into his home and looked out for me and gave me a place to live so that I could attend Hampden-Sydney. . .

"I never thought I could attend a college like Hampden-Sydney. It was Mr. Walker who made it possible for me, and several other students, to live and learn at Hampden-Sydney."

George Luther Walker graduated from Hampden-Sydney in 1910. After an eighteen-year career in public school educarion, as a teacher and principal in schools at Worsham, Green Bay, Dinwiddie, and Kenbridge, he came to Hampden-Sydney to work as Alumni Secretary. In 1936 he was made Dean of the College and held that office until 1939, when he went back to the classroom as a teacher. In 1942 he accepted again the active secretaryship of the Hampden-Sydney Alumni Association, which he held until his death in 1948.

He was also the managing editor of the Alumni Record for many years, often writing almost all the articles.

Dr. Dennison Maurice Allan '16, at the meeting of the General Alumni Association on May 29, 1950, said that "as Dean and as a teacher at his alma mater, he was characterized by a keen interest in the personal and spiritual welfare of each student; his influence for good on this campus was beyond measure. In community life he stood in the forefront of all movements for the public welfare. In school and civic activities he was widely known as an efficient worker and inspiring leader. For several years he served as the Chairman of the Prince Edward School Board. In conclusion, it may be said that wherever George Walker saw a need, he also saw an opportunity."

According to Dr. Armstrong, George Luther Walker served as an example of character and integrity and set the standard for being "our brother's keeper."

It is Dr. Armstrong's wish that the scholarship created to honor Mr. Walker will, like the one from VMI long ago, be used to aid students from the Shenandoah Valley, preferably from Rockbridge County.

Hampden-Sydney Gets 'A' On Bond Rating

Hampden-Sydney College was recently notified by Standard & Poor's that the College's bond rating had been raised from "A-" to "A."

Among the reasons cited for the improved rating were the growth in unrestricted resources, the significant increases in the endowment, the successful completion of the $60-million dollar capital campaign, and the implementation of the College's new strategic plan. Also cited were stable enrollment patterns, modest tuition increases, and balanced annual budgets.

The upgraded bond rating preceded the April 14 successful refinancing of the College's debt, at an interest rate approximately 25% lower than the previous interest rate, according to C. Norman Krueger, Vice President for Business Affairs and Treasurer. "In order to take advantage of the historically low interest rates in the bond market," he said, "we decided to refinance the College's existing debt of approximately $11 million and to add $2.5 million in new debt, primarily to be used to upgrade student housing. Even with the additional debt, the College's ratio of debt-to-equity is only nine percent, and the lower interest rate will save the College approximately $750,000 in interest costs over 20 years."

In order to obtain the lowest possible interest rate, Krueger requested that the Standard & Poor's Rating Service review current operations and issue an updated bond rating (a current assessment of the creditworthiness of an institution and of its ability to repay debt). In addition, the rating is widely used by the business community and by foundations as a broad gauge of an institution's financial viability. Standard & Poor's had last reviewed the College in 1992. A representative of Standard & Poor's visited Hampden-Sydney on March 24th to meet with College officials, including President Samuel V. Wilson and Board Chairman William C. Boinest of Richmond. The representative was given a comprehensive tour of the College's facilities and reviewed information on the College's operations and finances. On April 3, Hampden-Sydney's bond rating was increased from "A-" to "A."

"This is extremely good news," President Wilson stated, "and serves to validate further what we all know—the College continues to improve in all areas."

W. Glenn Culley, Jr., controller of the College (center above, with President Wilson and Chairman Boinest) was honored recently for his work, which strengthened the College's financial operations and led to the increase in Hampden-Sydney's financial rating.

At its spring concert, the Hampden-Sydney Glee Club performed a medley of works by George Gershwin, in honor of the centennial year of his birth.

In February James A. Arieti (Classics) organized a conference on Science and Religion funded by the John Templeton Foundation, the focus of which was biology, with lectures on Medieval embryology and Darwinism. In April he gave a lecture on "What Really Went on In Plato's Academy" at Sweet Briar College. At the annual meeting of the Classical Association of the Middle West and South, which was held in April in Charlottesville, Arieti presented a paper on "Plato's Odyssean Socrates in the Hippias Minor," and in May he traveled to Hunter College in New York to give a lecture on Plato's Parmenides, "The Apo-paideutic, Apo-treptic Philosopher."

David W. Gibson (Economics) presented a paper, "The Influence of Functional Background on Corporate Strategic Change in the Context of Chief Executive Officer Succession," at the annual meetings of the Academy of Strategic and Organizational Leadership in April. The paper grew out of his dissertation research.

At the Mid-South Philosophy Conference at the University of Memphis in February, James D. Janowski (Philosophy) read a paper on "The Schizophrenia of Contemporary Contract Theory," and in late December he attended the American Philosophical Association meetings in Philadelphia.

Amos Lee Laine (History) chaired a special session at the 33rd International Congress on Medieval Studies at Western Michigan University in May. One of 532 sessions at the conference, "Thomas More and His Circle" featured three readers, two of whom will join Laine in giving papers at the quinquennial International Thomas More Conference this summer in Ireland.

Anne C. Lund (Biology) attended the Virginia Branch of the American Society for Microbiology at the University of Richmond in January with five students, Paul Arnold '98, Brian DeFade '98, Mark Feldman '98, Randy Jones '98, and Bryan Tims '98. Lund was the coordinator of the undergraduate poster session, at which Jones had a poster. Also at the meeting was Dale Gehringer '92, who is attending graduate school at the University of Richmond.

An essay on "The Images of Government and Law-

Joan E. McRae (Modern Languages) has been awarded a Mednick Grant by the Virginia Foundation for Independent Colleges to support her work on The Reaction Poems of Alain Chartier's "Belle dame sans mercy": a Critical Edition. Many of the manuscripts of Alain Chartier's fifteenth-century poem La Belle dame sans mercy include poems by other authors, offering interpretations of Chartier's work. McRae is developing a new interpretation of those poems, which she believes comment not only on fifteenth-century literary interpretation, but also on the social climate of gender construction: requirements, restraints, and rights of an individual or her gender with regard to the other.

At the national meeting of the American Psychological Society in Washington, D.C., Daniel G. Mossler (Psychology) presented a research report entitled "Attitudes About Learning Disabilities Held by Faculty and Students at Small Colleges." Three of his students, Tom Davis '98, Brian Mackey '99, and Baker Wright '98, who helped with data collection and analysis, were co-authors of the report. At that same meeting, Mackey presented a research repott, "Comparisons of the Attitudes of Learning Disabled Students at Two Small Colleges," which had Mossler as co-author. Mossler is also co-author of a report presented by Robert T. Herdegen III (Psychology), "Characteristics and Predictors of Academic Performance Vary Across Subgroups of College Students."

James F. Pontuso (Political Science) has been named a John Adams Fellow at the University of London's Institute of United States Studies during his sabbatical leave in the fall. The Institute was founded in 1965 to promote and co-ordinate American Studies at the University and to assist liaison between teachers of subjects relating to the United States in other institutions of higher learning. Pontuso will be doing research and teaching a seminar on the United States presidency.

In March Diana Akers Rhoads (Rhetoric and English) was one of fourteen participants chosen for a three-day colloquium on the family, "Liberty, Responsibility, and the Family," held in Houston, Texas. As a member of Getting Stronger, an exercise (and support) group made up of cancer patients, Rhoads helped to produce an exercise video entitled "Getting Stronger: The Exercise Video for Women with Cancer." The video, which had its premier at the University of Virginia Cancer Center on March 18, has two parts: The first part is on beginning exercise, a lot of stretching, abdominal exercises, and relaxation. The second part includes cardiovascular and strengthening exercises, with stretching and relaxarion at the end. The video is available without cost to cancer patients in the Charlottesville area.

At the annual conference of the Virginia Association of Economists, held on March 19-20 at the Boar's Head Inn in Charlottesville, Kenneth N. Townsend (Economics), a past president of the Association, discussed a paper on using games in environmental economics instruction that was presented by an economist at Virginia Tech. William R. Hendley (Economics), also a past president, chaired a session at the conference. Anthony M. Carilli (Economics), treasurer of the Association, was on hand to facilitate the smooth running of regisrration for the conference. Peter M. Mitias (Economics) was elecred to a two-year term on the Board of Directors of the Association. Adam J. LaVier '97, who now works for the Federal Reserve Board, discussed a paper on a structural vector autoregression process for estimating inflation, presented by an economist at Trinity College in Washington. Christopher M. Broaddus '97, who works as an analyst in Virginia Commonwealth University's Institute for Public Policy, also attended the meeting.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY
COLLEGE

Summer 1998

As the Hampden-Sydney lacrosse team ended the regular season ranked #3 nationally, with their third ODAC crown, tennis and golf kept up the pace.

Lacrosse Crowns Spring Sports

By Dan McCormick '95

A SEASON TO REMEMBER: THE finest season in the twenty-year history of Hampden-Sydney lacrosse. The Tigers recorded their first-ever regular season record with only one loss, as well as recording their second 12-win season in the history of the program. H-SC's only regular season loss was to the #1 team in the country, Ohio Wesleyan, by a margin of only three goals. The Tigers ended their season, and a ten-game winning streak, in the second round of the NCAA Division III Lacrosse Championships with a 13-9 loss to Washington College (MD)—which eventually went on to win their first Division III national title over '96 and '97 national champion Nazareth College.

Hampden-Sydney ended their regular season ranked #3 nationally, while winning their third Old Dominion Athletic Conference crown. The Tigers went 6-0 in the ODAC with big wins over nationally-ranked conference foes Roanoke College (12-4) and Washington & Lee (11-6). The Tigers also defeated Gettysburg College, on the road, for the first time in ten seasons. The Tigers featured a highly effective controlled offense and a stingy defense. The combination resulted in a "goals against" average of 6.0 that ranked #1 nationally.

Head Tiger lacrosse coach Ray Rostan attributes the success of the season to a "wonderful blend of senior leadership, and a commitment to hard work and selflessness by the thirty young men in our program. The 1998 season is a culmination of several years of dreams and determination of our parents and alumni, and the endless support of our President, General Wilson, and our Director of Athletics, Joe Bush. Resulting from these goals has been the addition of a very fine assistant coach to our program, Bobby Wynne. The success of the '98 team is only a foundation for the future."

"The real story of 1998 was the team," continued Rostan. "Guys like senior co-captains David Lawrence and Jamie Worthen who instilled in the team a willingness to work and play together. Unheralded men like senior attackman Jody Garliss (28 goals and 26 assists) and senior midfielder Andy York (6 goals and 18 assists), and defensemen Brooks DuBose and Tom

"The real story of 1998 was the team: standouts and unsung heroes alike, guys . . . who instilled in the team a willingness to work and to play together."

The lacrosse team cheers after winning the game against Washington & Lee—and thus the ODAC Championship.

Craig Rogers, a development officer at HS-C for the past six years, was one of 20 Lacrosse officials selected to referee for the NCAA Final four Weekend. This year's five-game finals were played at Rutgers University in Piscataway, New Jersey. Officials were not told what their assignments would be until they arrived on site; Rogers was assigned to the four-man crew that officiated the Division III National Championship. Rogers, who played lacrosse at the University of North Carolina and was a member of the 1981 Division I National Championship Team, began officiating after he completed his Club Lacrosse career in 1991.

Oast, mainstays of the number one defense nationally. Than there is Jason Carlstrom who, with a pure work-ethic, developed into unquestionably the finest faceoff midfielder in Division III."

Five Lacrosse Players Named All-Americans

• Co-Captain Jamie Worthen was selected to the First Team All-America squad after being selected Honorable Mention in '96 and '97. He also received Academic All-America honors. The senior defenseman, who has been voted First-Team All-ODAC for three seasons, led the nation in ground-ball statistics for three seasons, with an incredible 448. "He's simply the finest all-around athlete I've ever coached," said Tiger lacrosse coach Ray Rostan. A premed major, Worthen was the co-recipient of H-SC's Gammon Cup at graduation.

• Junior attackman Chamie Burroughs earned Third Team All-America honors, after being named Honorable Mention A-A in '97. Also a two-year First-team All-ODAC selection, Chamie led the Tigers and the ODAC this season with 3.46 goals per game and hitting a milestone-surpassing 100 career goals. Burroughs has led the Tigers for three seasons, scoring 46 goals in '98. With 126 career goals in three seasons, Burroughs approaches the school record of 156 scored by Hall of Famer John Gibson '83.

• Junior midfielder Doug Palmer , a preseason All-America hopeful, lived up to expectations by being selected Third-Team All-America. Also named to the All-ODAC First Team for the first rime (after being named to the Second Team in '97), Palmer scored 17 points in his last five games, including a five-goal performance at Washington & Lee. Impressively, Palmer scored 26 goals in '98, for a total of 65 goals in his first three years as a midfielder.

• Junior defenseman Ward Smith was selected Third Team All-America, his first time in the national limelight. A First Team All-ODAC selection in '98, as well as an All-ODAC Academic selection three years running, Smith consistently covered the opponents top attackman. According to Coach Rostan, "Ward Smith is the most intelligent lacrosse player whom I have had the pleasure to coach. His speed is outstanding and footwork excellent." The junior shut down three of Division III's top attackman this season.

• Junior goalie Scott Ketcham led the ODAC in save percentage (67.2%) and led the nation in goals-against at 5.21 per game. In addition to being selected to the Honorable Mention All-America Team for his first time in '98, Ketcham was also voted First-Team All-ODAC. The big left-hander had many strong performances, including his 22 saves in the Tigers' 6-5 victory at Gettysburg.

Three Lacrosse Players in North-South Senior All-Star Classic

Three seniors, Brooks DuBose (defense), Jamie Worthen (defense), and Andy York (midfield), played for the South Team in the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association Division III North-South Senior Classic on June 12 at Nazareth College in Rochester, New York. The game is played in conjunction with the USILA All-America Banquet.

Co-Captain Jamie Worthen (at left in photo) was named to the First Team All-America squad after being selected "honorable mention" in '96 and '97. The senior defenseman has also been voted First-Team All-ODAC for three seasons, and led the nation in "ground ball" statistics for three seasons with an incredible 448. He was one of two recipients of this year's Gammon Cup at Hampden-Sydney's graduation.

TENNIS

The 1998 Hampden-Sydney tennis team capped another outstanding season with a second place team finish in the ODAC Championship Tournamenr. Sophomore Bryan Duquette became the first Hampden-Sydney player to be chosen Conference Player of the Year after winning the #1 singles championship.

GOLF

The 1998 season was a very productive year. The team placed third in the 1998 Old Dominion Athletic Conference. John Mears, a sophomore from Birmingham, Alabama, was placed on the All-Tournament Team and was the second leading vote-getter for MVP in the Conference. John was selected All-ODAC for the second straight year.

The team won first place finishes at Roanoke, W&L, and Hampden-Sydney, placed second at Lynchburg and sixth at the Virginia Intercollegiate. With a strong finish and the loss of one senior, the Tigers look to be a contender in 1999.

BASEBALL

If success can be measured in small steps, the Hampden-Sydney baseball team made great strides toward its goal of becoming one of the top teams in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference.

Under the direction of first-year coach Bobby Humphreys, the Hampden-Sydney baseball team posted a 6-18 record in 1998. The record marked an improvement of one game in the win column and six games in the loss column. What is not seen in the team's final record is its never-say-die attitude and heart. Of the Tigers' 18 losses, 10 were by two runs or less.

Highlights of the 1998 season included opening the conference season with a 17-10 pounding of Randolph-Macon. The following day the Tigers posted a 5-4 win over Tufts, who advanced to the NCAA tournament. In addition to Randolph-Macon, H-SC had conference wins over Bridgewater, Eastern Mennonite, Washington & Lee, and ODAC champion Virginia Wesleyan.

Hampden-Sydney's top three offensive performers were all seniors. Fulmer Burks, the DH, led the squad with a .367 average, 27 RBI and tied for the team lead with 30 hits. Jason Keefer, a starter in all 24 games at second, was second on the team with a .337 average and tied with Burks with 30 hits. Robbie Peay, a starter in all 24 games at first, finished tied with Keefer with a .337 average. Catcher Russ Bradshaw also concluded his career by starting all 24 games and led the team with three home runs.

Despite heavy losses to graduation on the offensive side, Hampden-Sydney will return nearly all of the pitching staff for the 1999 season. Junior Walt Bondurant led the pack with 53 innings pitched and 39 strikeouts. Vic Painter, a converted infielder, emerged as a strong starter, and tied for the team lead with 10 appearances. Freshman Steve Loder was second on the ream with eight starts, finishing third with 39 innings pitched.

Tennis Captain Ryan Gravender (left, with head tennis coach Bert Molinary) was the recipient of the annual Dick Edmunds '53 Tennis Award, given for leadership and team spirit.

Before going to South Florida, he had served one-year internships at the University of Cincinnati and at Rollins College in Orlando, Florida.

At the 1996 Summer Olympic Games, McCormick served as assistant producer for the volleyball competition in Athens, Georgia. He was responsible for helping the producer coordinate the protocol, player introductions, public address announcer, and music.

A mathematics major, he was a student assistant in the Sports Information office under former SID Dean Hybl. A native of Oakton, McCormick attended high school in London, England.

COACH PROFILE

Tony Shaver - Academic Coach

A coach at a Division III school has the intriguiong task of trying to recruit players whose academic skills are as outstanding as their talent on the court. Scholarships given to attract students must be based solely on academic achievement, not athletic prowess.

Tony Shaver, Hampden-Sydney's basketball coach, believes that there are advantages to playing ball on a Division III team. "We have the opportunity to offer a great education," he said. "We also have a chance to offer a student an opportunity to be an impact player, as opposed to sitting on a bench for two to three years in a big program."

"We have the opportunity to offer a great education. We also have a chance to offer a student an opportunity to be an impact player, as opposed to sitting on a bench for two to three years in a big program."

TONY SHAVER
Hampden-Sydney's basketball coach

This was certainly true for Jack Jirak, star forward on the basketball team that just won the ODAC Championship for the second year in a row. "The atmosphere here helped me to make the decision to come to Hampden-Sydney. Everybody was friendly and welcoming. I looked at Division I and II schools, but here is where I wanted to be." The emphasis on academics in a Division III school, far from deterring him, encouraged him that he could have a career after basketball. "I'm a merit scholar and I participate in the public leadership program. I want to go to graduate school and major in English. Maybe I'll teach, I'm not sure."

How do you recruit for a school that places more emphasis on academic achievement? "Well," explained Coach Shaver, "some of it is by word of mouth; alumni and friends refer names to us. One of the most important times for recruiting is in the summer." He paused. "I think a lot of people think that when the school bell rings and summer is here, the coaches do nothing. Nothing could be further from the truth: summer is one of our most important recruiting periods. We go up and down the East Coast, to all the All-Star camps for high school players, to get a look at a large number of kids during the summer. We then need to find out a little bit more about anyone we may be interested in—things other than skill, like grade-point average and strength of character."

Coach Shaver will need to determine if an individual is a prospect, which means not only having the GPA to support an application to H-SC, but the standard he keeps firmly in mind for Hampden-Sydney team members. "We recruit team players. One of the things that has made this basketball team so successful is how well the team plays together," Coach Shaver says. "The greatest compliment you can give to our players is that they play well together, as opposed to having selfish interests. Our guys work very hard at developing team chemistry, team togetherness. I do think that's what separates us, quite often, from other teams in the league." He added, "It goes back to the type of young guy we attract at Hampden-Sydney. The team goal is more important than an individual goal."

Jack Jirak will echo that sentiment. "I've never seen an instance of a teammate trying to hog the ball or court," he said. "I think we play well together because there's always been an example set by the seniors, of a total team effort. This is not just now, but in years past. There's a precedent here for team effort."

That precedent may have been established by Coach Shaver, who has coached at Hampden-Sydney for the past twelve years. Before coming to H-SC, Coach Shaver worked at Episcopal High School in Alexandria. Before that, he played basketball at North Carolina under near-demigod coach Dean Smith.

"Coach Shaver is fair and objective," says Jirak. "He knows how to be a friend and still maintain the coach's role—you know you better listen to him. It's not like that at Division I and II schools," he said. "They usually have an assistant coach who's the friend, while the coach is the man everyone's just a little bit in awe of." He continued, "When you get a scholarship because of athletics at a Division I or II school, you 'owe' the coach. You're dependent on him and your basketball ability to maintain that scholarship."

Hampden-Sydney College is a Division III school, so academics will always come before sports. NCAA rules forbid team practices before 4 pm and Division III rules mandare that academics take precedence over any athletic event. Scholarships are based on academic achievement, not athletic ability.

Coach Tony Shaver, however, has not viewed this as an obstacle. In fact, he much prefers to recruit "smart" players—and that preference has paid off handsomely. His academically-oriented players consistently make a "winning" team.

The Hampden-Sydney basketball team includes seven merit scholars.

THE RECORD OF HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

Summer 1998

A former Chairman of the Board of Trustees and a widely regarded philanthropist is remembered for a life of good works

S. Douglas Fleet, 1907-1998

"He gave countless days, weeks, months of service—service unpaid, usually unrecognized, and often exhausting—from no motive other than to serve an institution he loves."

JOSIAH BUNTING III
President of Hampden-Sydney from 1977-1987

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE, having aimed for over two centuries to form good men and good citizens, can claim many alumni who have proven the value of that mission. One of its most inspiring examples of a good man and a good citizen, however, is not an alumnus but someone whom Hampden-Sydney is still proud to claim as its own.

Sidney Douglas Fleet, known as Doug to those who had the privilege of knowing him personally, served on the Board of Trustees from 1968 until 1980; he was named Chairman of the Board in 1972. His curriculum vitae, over two pages long, lists the many accomplishments and affiliations of a man truly committed to public service in many arenas.

During his tenure as Chairman of the Hampden-Sydney Board of Trustees, Mr. Fleet saw the endowment grow from $4 million to $13.5 million; indeed, building the endowment was one of his pet projects.

RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH

Among Mr. Fleet's varied activities on behalf of the College: he accepted the College's new coat of arms from the Queen's Herald in 1976 (above) and was always an enthusiastic fund-raiser (right).

Capital improvements under his direction included a major addition to Eggleston Library, the renovation of Graham Hall into a student center, the construction of the Blake Apartments, and the building of a long-awaited athletic center, Kirby Field House. There, in May of 1981, the S. Douglas Fleet Gymnasium was dedicated.

Josiah Bunting III, President of Hampden-Sydney from 1977 to 1987, said of Mr. Fleer, "He gave countless days, weeks, months of service—service unpaid, usually unrecognized, and ofren exhausting—from no motive other than to serve an institution he loves."

In November of 1983 Mr. Fleet created the S. Douglas Fleet Scholarship to be awarded to "students in financial need, to provide the difference between the College's maximum [award] and full need."

Mr. Fleet was a retired vice president of Ethyl Corporation and Albemarle Paper Company. He served on the boards of numerous nonprofit charities and organizations, among them the Richmond Symphony, the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities (which under his guidance restored Richmond's John Marshall House in 1973), the MCV Foundation, the Library of Virginia, the George C. Marshall Foundation, and the Virginia State Library Foundation. He led several capital campaigns; in addition to running the campaign which raised the money to build Hampden-Sydney's Field House, he helped with fund raising for the Museum of the Confederacy, the R. E. Lee Council of the Boy Scouts of America, and the Historic Richmond Foundation.

In 1985 Hampden-Sydney College awarded the Madison Award to Mr. Fleer, as a non-alumnus who "has followed the selfless and foresighted example of our founding trustee James Madison in giving tirelessly and generously to nurture Hampden-Sydney and to assure the fulfillment of its high calling." In 1986 he received the Keating Medallion, an award given to friends of the College who have shown extraordinary dedication to Hampden-Sydney.

Mr. Fleet will be missed by many, but his good works will serve as lasting tributes to a good man—a good man and a good citizen.

After graduation Mr. Eason joined the U.S. Army Air Corps and soon became the operations officer for the 29th Fighter Squadron. Two years later, he was assigned to the 1st Fighter Squadron of the 2nd Air Commando group, again as operations officer. His group was sent to Burma to aid the British in fighting the Japanese. Among many accomplishments, Mr. Eason's Air Commandos conducted the longest fighter sweeps of the War—two 1600-mile roundtrips from their base. In March 1945, Mr. Eason displayed exceptional bravery by rescuing Col. Levi Chase from behind enemy lines during a raid near Ragoon—an act of heroism for which Mr. Eason received a Silver Star, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with two oak leaf clusters, and the Distinguished Unit Citation. After four years of active duty, Mr. Eason retired and worked as a commercial airline pilot for three years. He then became a teacher, coach, and administrator at Woodberry Forest School. ALUMNI PROFILE

William P. Hay, Jr. '42

The study of human nature needs not only time but opportunity as well. The Honorable William P. Hay, Jr., 10th judicial district court judge, has had both.

Retiring after 41 years on the bench, Judge Hay has literally "heard it all." This courtly gentleman, with the manners Southerners are famous for, reflects the picture of dignity and ease in his judicial robe. One of this year's Patrick Henry Award recipients for leadership and service to the Commonwealth of Virginia, Judge Hay does not lay aside his robe of service easily.

"I'm going to miss being on the bench. It's become a way of life." That way of life he started as a substitute judge during the forties, before there even was a 10th judicial district; instead there was what the judge referred to as "the old trial justice and county system," before the 1973 court reform. "I started practicing law in 1948. I was appointed a substitute judge in 1949, to help out on hearing the condemnation cases for Buggs Island Dam at Boydton. Judge Flood from Appomattox had been a World War I vereran and he was very interested in World War II veterans. I think he had some influence in getting me appointed as a substitute judge." Judge Hay received a permanent appointment as judge in 1957.

William Pierce Hay, Jr., graduated from Hampden-Sydney with the class of 1942. As a student he was elected to KA and ODK, played football, basketball, and baseball, was president of the Monogram Club his senior year, and senior class vice-president.

He didn't attend law school until after World War II. "The war broke out when we were graduated. I was already signed up for flight training. During those years it was pretty obvious that we were going to go to war. Things were moving in Europe pretty quickly." After an interesting career in the military, he was graduated from the University of Virginia Law School in 1948.

The judge feels that he has been able to maintain a sense of objectivity in his job. "It has not been difficult to remain objective. I don't take cases home with me. I've been fortunate in that I try to do the job and not let it follow me home." He thought a moment. "One of the more difficult periods was the period of integration. We were having a lot of demonstrations and sit-ins and school problems involving not only children, but adults. All of the local cases came before my court; it was a daily thing for several years. During that period there were a lot of children without schools—children both black and white."

"There's been a great deal of change in the last thirty years. In fact, the whole perspective toward the court seems to have changed." He continued, "There was a day and time when people summoned to jury duty would put on their Sunday clothes and be proud to serve on a jury. Now they're reluctant. The court system may not be perfect but it's the best we can do at this time."

What could be changed? "In the first place we have too many laws. You can hardly do anything without violating a law in this day and time." This father of five also has some strong opinions concerning juvenile law. "Everyone seems to think the court has a cure-all for everything. Parental responsibility for children seems to have been handed over to the authorities. Years ago parents took the responsibility."

After hearing cases for 41 years, was there any one particular story or case that stood out? Not really, even though most of the people who get hailed into court "think they have created something new when they come in with their reason for doing something they shouldn't have." The judge paused and laughed. "I remember one case, though. Back in the old days, an elderly lady from Roanoke was stopped. We had had a little snow and she had run off the road. She had the windows up, the heater on, and the motor running. When the officer went to the car, she rolled her window down and an odor of alcohol came from the car, and he immediately had her get out and charged her with driving under the influence. It turned out that she had her fruitcakes in the car, carrying them to friends. They had been soaked in brandy and had just filled the car with the odor of alcohol." He smiled, "I dismissed the case."

Among the more inventive of his "clients" were Hampden-Sydney boys, for whom he entertained a warm affection; many of them remember to this day how much they owe to his sense of humor and sympathy for youthful high spirits.

The judge has no definite plans for retirement. He will substitute on the bench. He is an avid golfer and a bird-hunter. "I've been bird-hunting since I was practically born." In addition to those pursuits he added, "My wife also seems to have a list of things she thinks I need to do."

The Tenth Judicial District Court judge had the final word, with typical dignity and humility. "It's been my pleasure to be a judge on this bench. It has been a rather enjoyable job to have."

Summer 1998

ALUMNI PROFILE

Frank Fulton '79

Frank Fulton, Jr., has accepted a position with a built-in challenge: as the German national baseball coach and director of baseball development for the German Federation of Baseball. He is charged with bringing Germany up to speed with Italy, Holland, and other countries which are consistently challengers for the European Cup, that continent's version of the World Series.

He plans to accomplish this goal in two more or less simultaneous thrusts. On the one hand he plans to introduce baseball into the German school system as part of physical education classes and, on the other, he expects to start a campaign to raise awareness of baseball among the nation's sports fans.

According to a recent profile of him in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, his extensive coaching background at Hampden-Sydney College and at Louisa High School, plus a pair of impressive interviews in Germany and San Diego, separated him among the international field of 50 applicants.

Mr. Fulton will be responsible for the German national baseball club, which includes players 19 and older, and for the junior team. In the process he will serve as commissioner, coach, developmental coordinator, groundskeeper, travel secretary, scheduler, fundraiser, equipment manager, and information director for all of German baseball.

According to Richard Epperson '79, now Director of Alumni Relations at Hampden-Sydney, the volume of work should not be a deterrent of success for Mr. Fulton. Mr. Epperson and Mr. Fulton were teammates as well as classmates. "Frank was one of the hardest-working guys on our baseball team," he said. "I remember seeing him, by himself, hitting balls in the snow. He would have a bucket of balls and a batting tee and would hit to the opposite side of the field."

Mr. Fulton mostly played right field and first base, and sometimes pitched, on the Hampden-Sydney Tiger team. "Everybody got along well with Frank," Mr. Epperson continued, "and he was a good leader." The former co-captain of the Tiger team also coached baseball at Hampden-Sydney before joining the public school system in Louisa.

Mr. Fulton will certainly use every leadership skill he has developed as he heads a staff of five that will try to bring baseball into the mainstream of German sports.

His job consists not only of introducing baseball in the schools but of capturing for a strange new sport the imagination and allegiance of a nation of die-hard soccer fans. That will, of course, mean soliciting and generating funds, and getting the necessary publicity, to ensure a broad interest in the game.

None of these challenges seems to daunt Mr. Fulton's enthusiasm for his task. In the profile of him in the Richmond-Times Dispatch, Mr. Fulton said that he was looking forward gleefully to this "opportunity of a lifetime."

Mr. Fulton will be joined in Germany by his wife Anna and their sons Peyton, Ben, Jonathan, Joshua, and Morgan, and their daughter Victoria.

"Frank was one of the hardest-working guys on our baseball team. I remember seeing him, by himself, hitting balls in the snow. He would have a bucket of balls and a batting tee and hit to the opposite side of the field."

Waters Cup established as tribute to Johnny and Sally Waters

The Peninsula Club of the Hampden-Sydney College Alumni Association has established THE WATERS CUP, an award to be presented annually to the outstanding Hampden-Sydney College alumni club chapter.

The award is named in honor of John H. Waters III '58, and his wife Sally C. Waters, in recognition of their love for and distinguished service to Hampden-Sydney College (see article, page 11). The purpose of the award is to inspire perpetual club improvement while promoting cooperation and friendly competition among our various alumni chapters.

The new award (the brainchild of Peninsula Alumni club president Bob Springer '77 and Rick Donaldson '73 of Newport News) will serve "to promote the general welfare of the College and to maintain the good will of alumni chapters towards the College and their comradeship toward each other." The award will be permanently displayed in the Office of Alumni Relations at Hampden House.

The Waters Cup shall be awarded on evaluation of the following criteria:

1. Alumni Attendance at Club Events: a percentage of alumni attendance shall be calculated for each club event and kept on file in the alumni office. This calculation will ensure fairness and equity to all alumni clubs regardless of size and the number of alumni constituents within club boundaries. This figure will not reflect the attendance of spouses, parents, or other special guests. Club leaders are challenged to promote attendance of all alumni in their chapter.

2. Admissions Yield: a percentage yield of incoming freshmen will be calculated for each club region. The yield is determined by matriculated freshmen relative to the number of acceptances from the club area.

3. Organization, Objectives, and Revitalization of the Club: each chapter should have objectives and direction, established by local leadership and approved by the Alumni Office. Organizational effort and creativity in the formulation and performance of these objectives is required. The Waters Cup is designed to stimulate current successful alumni programs with a clear vision for the future. Club objectives may include but are not restricted to the following: community service projects, formulating student recruitment goals and programs consistent with the policies of the Admissions Office, providing local and regional employment opportunities consistent with Career Services policies, and creating motivational club initiatives.

4. Leadership Attendance at the Alumni Council: attendance of the club president, and/or his designate(s) at the annual spring meeting will be considered.

The Hampden-Sydney College Alumni Association Officers will evaluate the above criteria and select the recipient. The Alumni Council reserves the right to amend the criteria.

The first Waters Cup winner will be announced during next year's Homecoming, in October 1999.

William T. Wilson '60, on behalf of the participants in ten years of the Alumni College, presented a memento to John and Sally Waters at the annual event's final dinner (far left).

At the Trustee banquet before Commencement, John Waters received the Keating Medallion and Sally Waters was given the Robert Thruston Hubard Award (left).

A Letter from the Director

"If you have not visited Hampden-Sydney recently, please make plans to return."

RICHARD P. EPPERSON II '79
Director of Alumni Relations

Fellow Tigers,

I am honored to follow John H. Waters III '58 as Hampden-Sydney's Director of Alumni Relations. Through four decades, John served our College and its alumni with distinction, dedication, loyalty, and unquestionable integrity. He established many outstanding relationships based on trust and confidence. I am mindful of my responsibility to maintain and nurture these bonds. At the same time, I sense an urgent need to recapture the interest and support of currently inactive graduate and non-graduate alumni.

The foremost objective of our office is to maintain the accuracy of our database and alumni profiles. We must also increase the quality and frequency of interaction with all alumni through a variety of innovative programs and club events, communications on the Internet, and publications - including a permanent alumni activities page in The Record. This exchange will improve and expand our alumni network, increase volunteer services, and serve as a valuable vehicle for institutional improvement beyond the year 2000. (You should connect to our Alumni website at www.hsc.edu for information about Hampden-Sydney's programs and events.)

Tiger alumni are competitive, always responsive to challenge. Frankly, that is why I've returned to H-SC, to face the challenges of the College's future with you. Recognizing the fierce competition for academic and athletic success, we strive to implement measurably effective ways of interacting. We must place our emphasis on aggressive prospective student identification and recruitment, along with a variety of career services and business exchange opportunities. The innovative efforts of our Alabama, Louisiana, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia alumni, which will be highlighted in future publications, currently reflect this strategy.

If you have not visited Hampden-Sydney recently, please make plans to return. Come for an athletic event, a symposium, a fine arts presentation, the Alumni Summer College, or make an impromptu visit. Always feel free to call the Alumni Office. Your feedback (positive or otherwise) will enable us to plan productive and meaningful alumni activities in the future.

Hampden-Sydney has prospered under President Sam Wilson's leadership. As alumni, we must take maximum advantage of our present momentum and not wait for a crisis to "rally the troops." Let's rise to the challenge and energize our alumni network. Reconnect with Hampden-Sydney College!

Sincerely,

Richard

ANNOUNCING THE

The Hampden-Sydney Charitable IRA

FOR YOUR CHILDREN

Protect your IRA from punishing taxes so you have something left to pass on to your heir

FOR THE COLLEGE

Create a philanthropic legacy for your family that will provide a positive contribution to Hampden-Sydney for generations to come.

FOR YOU

Continue to have complete access to your IRA during your lifetime.

Changes in the tax laws enacted by Congress during 1997 have increased interest in the charitable IRA. Elimination of excise taxes applying to retirement plans has made the charitable IRA an even better estate and charitable planning tool. It's amazingly simple, too.

AN EXAMPLE

After you and your spouse have used your IRA during your lifetime, you name Hampden-Sydney College as the ultimate beneficiary. Together, we create a charitable remainder unitrust that pays out 6 percent to your children over 15 years. (Payout and length of trust can vary based on your individual needs.)

Based on a $1,000,000 IRA, your estate would receive a charitable deduction of $410,750. This would result in a tax saving of $418,577, based on a $2,000,000 total estate.

After those 15 years, the trust creates a permanent charitable fund in your name at Hampden-Sydney. Income from this fund will be guided by your choices: scholarship, support for teaching, support for learning, or general funds.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS:

Q. Isn't there anything I can do to protect my retirement plan for my children and loved ones?

A. Yes there is. It's called the charitable IRA, which can provide much more money for your heirs and establish a philanthropic legacy in your name to help Hampden-Sydney for generations to come.

Q. Why have I never heard of it before?

A. Because it wasn't even possible until 1994. That's when the Treasury Department first allowed a charitable trust to be named a beneficiary of an IRA. After the IRA rules changed, it took tax experts a while to figure out the best way to use this new estate-planning tool.

FURTHER INFORMATION

If you feel that a charitable trust funded by your IRA might be of value to you, get in touch with the Development Office toll-free at (800) 865-1776 and ask for George Peters. A confidential, detailed illustration can be prepared to show how a Hampden-Sydney charitable IRA would affect your estate plans in your specific situation.

ON THE COVER

Making a splash for Hampden-Sydney: a rider tears up to the finish line in the cross-country mountain-bike race which celebrated the dedication on November 9 of the new Wilson Nature Trail, which traverses the back 350 acres of the campus. The new trail, funded by an anonymous donor, is used by hikers, bikers, joggers, casual walkers, biology classes, and the cross-country team. It is nearly four times as long as the previous nature trail, still very much in use by biology students and lunchtime walkers, which was given by Dr. Shelton Hardaway Short III '48, in memory of his parents.

CHAIRMAN'S MESSAGE

Within these pages are much more than lists of names of alumni, parents, and friends. Each individual and entity herein has helped nourish and preserve Hampden-Sydney College. Some have endowed scholarship funds, others annual awards. Some assisted with the purchase of a new nuclear resonance spectrometer for the Chemistry Department; others paid for the renovation of Cushing Hall, bought athletic equipment, placed books in the library, and did something so simple yet vital as to provide for heating, lighting, and air conditioning. All have contributed to the formation of "good men and good citizens" and have been integral to the College's feat—unusual in this age—of concluding its nineteenth consecutive year with a balanced budget.

William C. Boinest '54
Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Hampden-Sydney College

It is truly gratifying to see this small College emerge from the tumult of the debate over coeducation, successfully conclude a major capital campaign, and raise almost seven million dollars in the following year. In every category making up total revenues for fiscal 1997-1998, Hampden-Sydney exceeded its goals while reducing its cost of raising a dollar.

But in one area of particular importance—the percentage of alumni support—the College faltered, dropping from 41.6% to 39.8%. This percentage reflects the number of alumni who support the College's Annual Fund, regardless of the size of their gift. It is important because it defines Hampden-Sydney to those outside our family and beyond our gates—to foundations and corporations, and to those compiling ratings—who see it as an indicator of how alumni feel about their College. This coming year we must make every effort to retain all who lent their support to this institution and especially encourage more alumni to do so.

We have come through another good year, and with the continuing help of those who hold this place dear, we shall have even better ones in the days ahead.

Thank you for your concern and for placing your trust in this grand old College. It is an honor indeed for me to serve as Chairman of the Board of an institution with such a distinguished heritage and with such caring alumni and friends.

William C. Boinest '54
Chairman of the Board

PRESIDENT'S LETTER

I have said it before, but I will say it again and again . . . one of the great joys and privileges afforded me as President is being able to offer thanks to the members of the extended Hampden-Sydney family who have contributed to the enrichment and continuation of this nearly 225-year-old College.

The names of unselfish and generous people, our alumni and friends, fill these pages and attest to another successful year, even more successful than 1996-97, a year in which we garnered a CASE Circle of Excellence Award for Overall Educational Fund Raising Performance (Hampden-Sydney was one of only two small liberal arts institutions so honored in the nation). Such recognition is achieved only through the combined efforts of those who volunteer their time and resources and those who labor in our Office of Development.

Samuel V. Wilson
President, Hampden-Sydney College

The Chairman's letter provides an eloquent synopsis of how gifts were spent this past year and chronicles the journey traveled by the College over the last three years. Mr. Boinest points out that we exceeded all of our fund raising goals in 1997-98 save one—percentage of alumni participation. This is an area in which we must improve. I echo the Chairman's closing injunction for all to "pull together" to continue to demonstrate our pride in Hampden-Sydney's achievements.

Hampden-Sydney's excellence throughout the years has come from its astute ability to hold onto that which is good and sensible and to change that which is not. In the past, such decisions, although they did not seem so at the time, were much simpler. Before us lies the challenge presented by the revolution in technology. The pace of change in this area behooves caution—a wrong decision will be extraordinarily costly while the correct one will enhance the student's educational experience. We will, as we have done before, extract the sensible and worthy, thereby assuring into the next century an "atmosphere of sound learning" to form "good men and good citizens."

I look forward to continuing the journey with you.

REPORT FROM THE VICE PRESIDENT FOR BUSINESS AFFAIRS & TREASURER

A strong management team, an outstanding level of contributions, and a dynamic market all combined to make 1997-1998 an exceptional year in the College's operations. The College ended its fiscal year on June 30, 1998, solidly in the black, the twentieth consecutive year of balanced budgets. At June 30, 1998, the College reported assets of $176 million, an increase of $23 million from the amount reported at June 30, 1997. For the period from June 30, 1997, to June 30, 1998, net assets increased from $136 million to $155 million.

C. Norman Krueger
Vice President for Business Affairs & Treasurer

During the year the College took advantage of prevailing low interest rates to refinance and restructure its long-term debt. In addition to refinancing its debt, the College also borrowed $2.5 million of new debt to finance campus improvement. The effective interest rate on the entire package was approximately 5% annually. During this refinancing, Standard & Poors' rating agency reviewed the College's finances and operations. Following this review the College's credit rating was increased from A- to A, in April 1998. We all view this improved rating as a strong vote of confidence.

For the past year the College has been working with the consulting firm of Dober, Lidsky, Craig and Associates, Inc., to prepare a campus facilities master plan. This plan will serve as a guide for the College's physical development for approximately the next decade. It is expected that the final plan will be submitted to the Board of Trustees for their approval in May 1999. In preparation for the master plan, a digitized map of the College's facilities was prepared from aerial photographs taken during the spring break. The results have been downloaded to the College's computer-assisted design program and are currently being used in the master planning process.

While numerous construction projects occurred this past year, understandably the most complex and important was the total renovation of Cushing Hall. Happily, the project was completed on time, allowing the building to be occupied this fall by 101 freshmen and seven Resident Advisors. While fully renovated to meet current codes and student expectations, Cushing Hall continues to boast the large rooms, high ceilings, and wide corridors that have been the building's hallmark. In addition to the residence rooms, the renovated Cushing Hall provides eleven bathrooms, eight lounges, and handicapped accessibility on the first floor of the first and fourth passages.

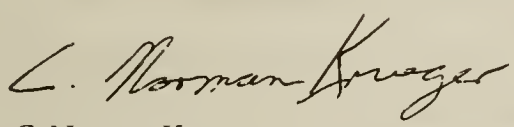
Progress continues in improving information technology on campus. Through the generosity of Mr. J. B. Fuqua, the College was able to complete the installation of the campus telecommunications network to every faculty member and every student resident room on campus.

The College's endowment at June 30, 1998, was approximately $105 million. The annualized total return for the twelve months ended June 30, 1998, from all managed endowment funds, was 21.4% (net of all fees). Although the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1998, has started out with turbulence in the financial markets, the College has a sound investment strategy, committed Trustees, and proven managers. Thus, we remain confident in our future.

The year ended June 30, 1998, was exciting and productive and we have expectations that 1998-99 will be equally so.



C. Norman Krueger
Vice President for Business Affairs
& Treasurer

Former Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger was named the Malcolm Myers Distinguished Visiting Professor during the spring of 1998. He came to campus to participate in the panel of the Shining Seas Symposium in March and to lead discussion in various classes. Here he is shown, at right below, speaking to the political science class taught by ambassador William Jones. The professorship, which has introduced the students to such distinguished public figures as former governor L. Douglas Wilder and Congressman L. F. Payne, is made possible by an endowment funded by Malcolm R. Myers '57 of Mentor, Ohio, and by John and Elizabeth Drinko of Lyndhurst, Ohio. It supports the Hampden-Sydney Public Service Program.
